

LIAM TULLEY TO WORK WITH INBETWEENERS STAR ON SITCOM PILOT

Liam Tulley and Inbetweeners actor Greg Davies are to co-write a sitcom pilot about a group of delinquents on Community Service.

The new commission will see Avalon Television produce a new 30-minute pilot for SKY.

JON MOUNTAGUE, head of comedy at SKY said: "I'm really pleased to be making a pilot with Greg and Liam. They've managed to write a very funny, laugh-out-loud script with jokes coming thick and fast, but also tell a good comic tale."

JON THODAY, Joint Managing Director at Avalon Television said: "We are really pleased to be producing this show for SKY. Greg is obviously a giant in the world of comedy, in more ways than one, but I am extremely happy to be working with Liam on his first major project for us. His humour on stage is a proven hit with a live audience and I personally am excited to to get the chance to develop it for television."

An Avalon Television production, the pilot was commissioned by JON MOUNTAGUE, head of comedy at SKY, while the Executive Producers are RICHARD ALLEN-TURNER and JON THODAY. The show will be co-written by fellow comics GREG DAVIES and LIAM TULLEY. The pilot is set to feature an ensemble cast, including LIAM TULLEY, and will be directed by GREG DAVIES.
